Join The Institute of Cultural Affairs family for a groundbreaking conference, bringing together development practitioners, community leaders, policy innovators, government, the private sector, and world-class facilitators to identify new solutions to the most pressing human development challenges of our time.

What are the key emerging trends and innovative approaches to social, economic, and political development? How can culture – the shared images, patterns, and common understandings of every society – shape development outcomes? What steps can we take today to bring the voices of the peoples of the world onto the global stage for meaningful participation in the future?

Once every four years, the dynamic facilitators of The Institute of Cultural Affairs design a completely interactive conference for addressing these essential questions, utilizing our unique methodologies. You are invited to explore, challenge, and create new models, strategies, and plans for building a better future.
